

Abstract

5 The invention relates to an optical retardation film comprising two layers of an anisotropic polymer adjacent to each other or adjacent to both sides of a substrate, characterized in that each layer exhibits a tilted structure with an optical symmetry axis having a tilt angle θ relative to the plane of the layer, to a means to produce substantially linear polarized light comprising such an optical retardation film and to 10 a liquid crystal display comprising such an optical retardation film.

10

15

20

25

30

35